

The Big List Of Work At Home Jobs

2019 List Of Work From Home Jobs

Just a few decades ago, the vast majority of work-at-home job opportunities were far from profitable. And before the dawn of the Internet, it was much harder to sort through the scams and the real opportunities.

Some of the “gotcha” job offers from the past include check-cashing schemes, mystery shopping, medical billing “jobs” that require you to purchase expensive computer software, and craft-making jobs that ask you to pony up the cash for materials before you get started. And let’s not forget about the famous envelope-stuffing scam that was nothing more than a pyramid scheme designed to siphon money from as many people as possible, of course this has turned into the $25 dollar email scam now.

As the old adage goes: “If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.” You should always research and look for reviews on any company regardless if it is an online job or a physical place to work.

In 2019, the questionable work-at-home jobs are still out there. But improvements in technology and the birth of social media have ushered in a new wave of such jobs that are actually legitimate. Check out these real work-at-home jobs for 2019 and beyond:

Web Developer

It's fairly easy to build your own website if you take advantage of the many free learning opportunities online. However, much of the population isn't equipped to build their own site, or doesn't have the time, which is why so many people make a living building websites and blogs for others. According to the BLS, around 25% of Web developers were self-employed in 2012, with the vast majority able to work at home, or anywhere with a laptop and speedy Internet connection.

Even better, the national median wage for Web developers was $63,160 in 2013, with the top 10% earning an average of $110,350. And you typically don't need an advanced degree to begin working in this field. All you need is some postsecondary education, applicable experience, and a portfolio of successful sites you've built and managed. There are even intensive coding boot camps designed to teach programming skills in just a few short months

Travel Agent

Although the demand is expected to decrease over the next decade, the opportunities are still there for travel agents who can harness the Internet to earn clients and help them plan their adventures. According to the BLS, job prospects may be best for travel agents who offer expertise in certain regions of the world, have experience planning tours or adventures, or who focus on group travel.

About 12% of travel agents were self-employed in 2012, but the vast majority of the rest of them worked in the travel arrangement and reservation services industry. Travel agents earned a national median wage of $34,530 in 2013.

Blogger

Becoming a blogger is unlike any other work-at-home job in that it is something you have to build yourself. Many bloggers make little money in the beginning until they grow and become established. This takes time because of all the misleading information and so many scams that are wanting to take advantage of those wanting to pursue this type of income.

However, there is a lot of potential for writers who are able to build an audience, grow their site, and find a way to monetize it and start earning an income. Some of the ways bloggers make money include affiliate advertising, sponsored posts, Google AdSense, and product sales.

Getting started as a blogger can be an inexpensive way to start your own business, with domains costing an average of $12 per year and Web hosting costing as little as $3.49 per month.

Fortunately I have already been through all the rip-offs, scams and seen all the crazy information that doesn't work. So I can give you the secret right here on how to succeed by giving you the right organization to join. You can join it for free or you can become a premium member at a low monthly rate. Either level will give you all the training and information you need to start your own blog and home business. Signup with Wealthy Affiliate

In order to succeed online, your site needs to be fast, as in like open in around 2 seconds. So one thing many will not tell you, when you start out, start with a hosting company that is already fast and reliable. Check out A2

Is This Work-From-Home Job a Scam?

Even though there are many legitimate work-at-home opportunities, the scams of years ago still exist. But it's up to you to find them and steer clear, and it's not always easy to tell the real deal from a scam.

According to the National Consumers League and Fraud.org, there are some steps to take and signs to watch out for when you're starting your search for a work-at-home job:

- Research, research, research: It's important to know exactly whom you're working for. When you find a job posting you're interested in, take special care to research the company that's hiring. Check them out with the Better Business Bureau and conduct a Web search for any complaints or less-than-stellar reviews.
- Ask for references: Any company that's hiring workers to work at home might have other people working for them as well. Ask how many and find out if you're able to contact any of them. If they are unwilling to provide references or contact information, it might not be a good sign.
- Think long and hard before shelling out any money: Some work-at-home jobs will require you to purchase materials or equipment to get started, and while that doesn't mean they're not legitimate, it should be a red flag. If you are asked to pay for equipment, make sure you understand what you're buying, and from whom. Also ask about the return policy for your equipment if your new gig doesn't work out.

Many online job platforms such as Upwork.com also have their own system for recognizing and removing job scams. According to the site, many of them involve “employers” who try to pay workers outside the site’s payment system, and engage in some sort of check or money order fraud. For more tips on avoiding job scams on freelancing sites, read about it here.

Working at home is a dream of many, and thanks to technology, that dream is coming true for more people than ever. But if you want to work at home, you’ll need to research the possibilities and develop the skills required for many of these jobs.

So what are you waiting for? With the right skills, you could be working at home in 2019.
